What is a flow battery?

A flow battery is an electrochemical cell that converts chemical energy into electrical energy through ion exchange across an ion-selective membrane. It separates two liquid electrolytes stored in separate tanks. Typical flow battery chemistries include all vanadium, iron-chromium, zinc-bromine, zinc-cerium, and zinc-ion.

What are the different types of flow batteries?

Some of the types of flow batteries include: Vanadium redox flow battery (VRFB) – is currently the most commercialized and technologically mature flow battery technology. All iron flow battery – All-iron flow batteries are divided into acidic and alkaline systems, and acidic all-iron flow batteries are relatively mature in commercial development.

How big is the flow battery market?

According to some estimates, the global flow battery market is projected to grow to a valuation of more than $1.18 billion by 2030, and is expected to record a compound annual growth rate of 23% during that forecast period.

How will the flow battery market grow?

The flow battery market is expected to grow significantly as the share of renewables increases in the primary energy mix. Despite their higher CapEx cost compared to lithium-ion batteries, flow batteries are expected to be used extensively for both front-of-the-meter and behind-the-meter applications in the next several years.
