Overview

Can a courtyard provide a window into changing seasons?

But, as these four examples show, courtyards can provide an equally satisfying window into changing seasons – and, when viewed through glass by way of patio doors, skylights, or frameless windows, can give us a glimpse of greenery from the weatherproof comfort of almost any room in the house.

How can a glass screen be used in a courtyard?

By closing and opening the screens according to environmental factors, the glass openings into the courtyard can thus be moderated, allowing either full or partial views as well as additional insulation when needed.

How many courtyards are there in a Beijing renovation project?

This renovation project in a historic quarter of Beijing boasts not one, but three separate courtyards, two of which are connected through a newly built glass veranda.

How can a glass wall make a home more eco-friendly?

Making use of glass' natural transparency, this either creates a soothing and shielding effect by bringing a wall of greenery indoors or invites outdoor exploration and movement. While much more reduced, the vegetation in the courtyard of this residence in Australia is just as effective.
